

How to find Holocaust Victims

1) United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM)

The International Tracing Service (ITS) and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM) have prepared this searchable Inventory of the Archive of the International Tracing Service in order to provide Holocaust survivors, their families, and other interested researchers with an overview of the more than 21,000 separate historical collections of documentary material that are contained in the archive of the International Tracing Service.

5) Other Sources: The USHMM World Memory Project. <http://WorldMemoryProject.org>

The USHMM launched this project on May 3, 2011 and is working in partnership with Ancestry.com to make information more accessible.

American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee (JDC) announced the launch of its Shared Legacy Project in May of 2011. <http://jdc.org/sharedlegacy>. The website enables the public to perform searches in a database of more than 500,000 names and to view and identify photos from 14 countries where JDC operated during and after the war.

Project HEART is a comprehensive archive of Jewish Holocaust victims' assets. This project was recently launched and is a work in process but may in the future assist people in their search. <http://www.heartwebsite.org/>.
